

“Quality is at our Core” – Succession Planning

Our company has had the privilege of benefiting from the long service of two retired experienced engineers Mr Piet Gouws and Mr Gordon Stewart. Mr G. Stewart has extensive experience in civil consulting engineering, specializing in bulk infrastructure and urban development, project planning and development, feasibility studies, preliminary and final engineering designs, contract documentations, project management and engineer in charge of contract monitoring staff.

Mr Piet Gouws who has just retired as our Managing Director. He has extensive experience in Designing of sewers and civil engineering works for buildings, design and upgrading of wastewater treatment plants, design of groundwater management systems, design of water supply systems to mention but a few.

They both have been on a program of transferring such skills to younger engineers within the company, who have demonstrated an interest and acumen to take up these streams as career paths.

We have been able to negotiate with both of them to carry on with the mentoring beyond their retirement period in order for the company not to loose such valuable skills. They will concentrate their efforts at project level working closely with teams that will learn during project implementation.

We have the pleasure in announcing our new Managing Director Mr Colin Miller, with effect from 1st July 2007 and have joined Bergstan 28 years ago.

He is a registered engineer, specialising in structural engineering with extensive experience in the field. This move has resulted in the company reviewing its succession plan with the view of capacity building and increasing responsibilities to more people and making more shares available in the light of retirement.
